NEW TAX BILL GOES TO CONGRESS MONDAY

HOUSE WILL PROBABLY TAKE IT UP TUESDAY

DEMOCRATS TO FIGHT FOR COMPLETE ABOLITION OF AUTO-MOBILE TAX

REPEAL SOUGHT OF THEATRE ADMISSIONS OF $1 AND LESS

Washington, Dec. 3.—(UP)—The new $235,000,000 tax bill was completed today by the house ways and means committee, ready for introduction into the house Monday.

It will be taken up by the house probably Tuesday, and is expected to pass with some amendments, within ten days.

Democrats, under the leadership of Rep. Garner, Tex., ranking democrat on the committee, will seek to reduce taxes another $100,000,000. Among other things, they will fight for complete abolition of the automobile tax, instead of the cut from 3 to 1½ per cent as the bill provides.

This would lose off $66,000,000 in revenue alone, instead of the $33,000,000 auto tax cut provided by the bill.

Other principal reductions of the bill are:

Corporation tax, reduced from 13½ to 11½ per cent, a loss in revenue of $166,000,000.

Repeal of taxes on theater admissions of $1 and less, a revenue loss of $8,000,000.

Reduction of taxes on club dues from 10 to 5 per cent, a revenue loss of $5,000,000.

A $12,000,000 revenue loss would be caused by an increase $2,000 to $3,000 of the tax on corporations with net incomes of less than $20,000. Repeal of stamp taxes and taxes on cereal beverages and other reductions are also provided by the bill.

The estate tax, whose repeal was sought by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, is retained in the bill.

No reduction is provided on individual income taxes, which formed the major consideration of the last three previous revenue bills.

Washington, Dec. 3.—A compromise to prevent blockade of the senate at its opening session Monday was undertaken today by Senator Curtis, republican, Kansas, majority floor leader.

Curtis submitted to leaders interested in the Smith-Vare cases a proposal for an armistice until after President Coolidge delivers his message Tuesday.

Simultaneously he wrote a reply to the independent group promising that farm relief, labor injunction legislation and the resolution for investigation of American policies in Central and South America will be assured a final vote as the independents had demanded.

CONFUSION BACKSTAGE REIGNS IN SENATE

By PAUL R. MALLON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Dec. 3.—All is confusion backstage in the senate for the grand opening session of the seventieth congress here Monday.

Leaders are tearing their hair over some of the prima donna statesmen; ultimatums are being served by the respective factions; the independent republican group is demanding that its rights be recognized, and Senator Davis Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, is threatening to start the session off with a filibuster.

Senator Curtis, republican, Kansas, floor leader, is attempting to make peace, but the groups do not appear to be in the mood for peace, and present indications are that the session will start off with more than the usual fireworks.

Senator Reed of Pennsylvania is aroused because of the threat that Senators-elect Vare, republican, of Pennsylvania, and Smith, republican, Illinois may be barred. Curtis had worked out an agreement with democrats whereby Vare and Smith would stand aside temporarily when senators are called to the vice president's rostrum to receive the oath of office. Reed has made no public statement of his intentions but leaders have

CHARGES WIFE THREATENED LIFE OF GEORGE REMUS

GEORGE CONNORS, HENCHMAN OF BOOTLEGGER, GIVES TESTIMONY

REMUS' DEFENSE IS HE WAS DRIVEN INSANE BEFORE THE KILLING

By PAUL W. WHITE (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Courtroom, Cincinnati, O., Dec. 3.—George Connors, henchman and friend of George Remus, returned to the witness stand today and charged that Mrs. Remus once threatened the life of her husband and started to draw a revolver.

Connors, having said he held an opinion as to the sanity or insanity of the one-time "king of bootleggers," went on to relate other incidents that occasioned the opinion.

Remus' defense is that he was driven insane before the killing, his mind becoming impaired because of the stories he heard concerning Mrs. Imogene Remus and her alleged "paramour," Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., former department of justice operative.

The revolver episode, he said, took place when Connors, Remus and others went out to the Price Hill mansion in the hope of effecting a settlement between husband and wife.

Mrs. Remus said "What are you people doing here? This is my house." Connors related and he said he replied, "You can stay here if you want to. I'll go to a hotel if you don't want me here."

been informed he will prevent anyone from being sworn by Vare and Smith are refused the oath.

Curtis' plan, if followed, would permit organization without raising at once the Smith-Vare eligibility issue.

Reed's threat if carried out would keep the senate from organizing and would tie up everything at the outset.

The independents have served notice in writing upon the leaders that if the regulars want them to "play ball" in organizing the senate, they must have assurances that their legislative program will be considered. They want a date set now for consideration of a farm relief bill, and they want a place on the legislative program for consideration of a bill to curb the use of court injunctions in labor disputes, and a resolution calling for investigation of American diplomatic policy in Central America.

To keep peace in the party, the regulars have indicated they will consent to the arrangement.

The usual peaceful opening day routine of the house also is expected to be rudely disturbed by a fight planned by democrats and western republicans for liberalizing of house rules. The strategy of this battle probably will be worked out today after the arrival of Rep. Finis Garrett, Tenn., democratic floor leader, to whom democrats will present their plan.

Republican house members were warned today to be in their places Monday and stay there, in anticipation of the fight. Republican Floor Leader Tilson today termed the proposed rule change, which would (Continued on page 3)

PUT DYNAMITE IN STOVE TO KILL TEACHER

HIRAM REED, 24, FARMER, HELD UNDER CLOSE GUARD AT DANA, ILL.

EXPECTED TO KILL MISS IOLA BRADFORD, SO HE WOULD NOT HAVE TO MARRY HER

Dana, Ill., Dec. 3.—(UP)—Her face swathed in bandages and her beauty permanently marred, Iola Bradford, pretty 23 year old school teacher, today neared the crisis that is expected to determine the fate of Hiram Reed, 24, son of a wealthy Moosville farmer.

Meanwhile Reed was held under close guard at the La Salle county jail where yesterday he told authorities how he had placed the two sticks of dynamite in the school house stove to kill the teacher in order that he might not have to marry her. He was the father of her expected baby.

Little hope for Miss Bradford's recovery is held by attending physicians. She remembers only that she was stooping over to light the stove when suddenly she was hurled through space after a deafening explosion.

The schoolhouse was literally swept away by the blast. Little Grace Johnson, nine years old, the only person in the school with the teacher, was unhurt.

The victim's clothing was torn to shreds, her face and head badly swollen and all teeth knocked out. She cannot believe it was Hiram who committed the crime.

Action of authorities was being held in abeyance today pending outcome of the girl's injuries. Reed was ordered held under $45,000 bond.

Reed, in making his confession, took obvious pride in discussing details of his plan. He told authorities how he had purchased the two sticks of dynamite instead of a wedding ring and demonstrated how he picked the school house lock to gain entrance.

"I went to see Iola the night I put the dynamite in the stove. She was getting to be quite a nuisance with her insistence that we get married before the baby was born. A fellow doesn't want to marry too young nowadays, you know," he said.

"After I left her I walked to the school house and shoved the dynamite up the flue. I attached the caps and ran the fuse to the firewood so it would be touched off when the fire was lit in the morning."

Miss Bradford is the daughter of a retired Presbyterian minister.

WILL PART WITH AN EAR FOR $2,500—15 CHICAGOANS WILLING

Chicago, Dec. 3.—(UP)—At least 15 Chicago men and women will part with an ear for $2,500 if developed here today when that number answered an advertisement of a wealthy New York society matron.

The sum was offered in a newspaper advertisement by J. J. McCarthy, Chicago lawyer, who refused to divulge the name of his client. He said she was well-known in New York and Chicago and had lost her left ear in an automobile accident.

One of the applicants was a young woman who said her husband had been out of work and that the family was destitute. She has a baby, she said.

Another was a world war veteran who wrote, "No one cares how I look anyway." McCarthy will make the selection from photographs.

WEATHER PROPHETS BEWILDERED; RAIN IN ZERO TEMPERATURE

There was a possibility that a pocket of warm air existed above the cold air clouds, the prognosticators said.

FOUND GUILTY OF DROWNING FRIEND

NEW YORKER PLANNED TO COLLECT $70,000 INSURANCE POLICY

New York, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Joseph Lefkowitz, former clothier, was held in the Raymond street jail today waiting imposition of death sentence next Tuesday. He was found guilty of murder in the first degree last night for the drowning of his friend Benjamin Goldstein, 22, last August in Gravesend bay. Lefkowitz held a $70,000 insurance policy on Goldstein's life and planned to collect the money.

A 17-year-old boy, Harry Greenberg, tried at the same time, was acquitted. It was alleged that he had been Lefkowitz's tool and knew nothing about the plot to deceive the insurance company or take Goldstein's life.

Irving Rubinzahl, 19, also connected with the drowning, turned state's evidence and will be tried later. He confessed that he pushed Goldstein out of a rowboat and received $250 from Lefkowitz for the act.

SENATOR BLEASE, SOUTH CAROLINA, IN PREDICTION

HIS STATE DELEGATION IS TO WALK OUT IF RULE IS ABOLISHED

CLAIMS IT WOULD ROB SOUTH OF VOICE IN SELECTION OF CANDIDATE

Washington, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Sen. Blease, democrat, South Carolina, today predicted a split in the democratic party if the two-thirds rule is abrogated at its next national convention.

"I have advised that the South Carolina delegation walk out of the convention if the present two-thirds rule is abolished," Blease said. "Such a change would rob the south of any voice in the selection of a candidate and its delegates might as well absent themselves."

Blease said he was ready to support Governor Alfred Smith or any other candidate who might be chosen by a two-thirds majority, although opposed to Smith as the democratic candidate. He predicted formation of a third party if a majority rule is instituted.

Blease has promised to break with his party in the senate next week by voting to seat Senators-Elect Smith and Vare on the ground it would be a violation of state rights to bar them.

GOV. AL SMITH VOICES OPINION OF PROHIBITION

NEW YORK GOVERNOR, PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY, SPEAKS OF ITS ENFORCEMENT

"PEOPLE HAVE RIGHT TO OPPOSE LAW WITH WHICH THEY ARE NOT IN SYMPATHY"

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 3.—(UP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith, democratic presidential possibility, last night voiced his opinions of prohibition and its enforcement.

The governor told members of the New York State League of Women Voters that he stood for law enforcement but that "one of the fundamental rights of citizenship is the right of our people to organize to oppose any law and any part of the constitution with which they are not in sympathy."

The question of prohibition law enforcement is not one for either the nation or the state, Smith said. He declared it was a local issue.

Gov. Smith pointed out the Anti-Saloon League planned to raise $5,000,000 for their work during the coming five years. He raised the question why the forces opposed to prohibition did not have just as much right to organize.

The governor discussed point for point a resolution that the Nassau county branch of the league planned to submit for a vote of the convention today.

Discussing a section on respect for law and enforcement, the governor said, "Enforcement of law and obedience to law are the very cornerstones of the governmental structure."

Gov. Smith read a section of the resolution saying that the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment was "openly attacked."

"What is wrong about that?" asked the speaker. "Is there any reason why the opposition to these acts should not organize? Is there any question about the solidity, or the force or the effectiveness of the organization in their favor?"

"In all my years as a public official, I have taken oaths to sustain the constitution of this state, and there are parts of it that I hate. But I promised to sustain it and I will sustain it. But I do not promise to give up the right to oppose the parts of it I do not like."

In reply to a section of "nullification," the governor said, "I have no knowledge of any one in public life who is preaching that. If there is any such case, I should like to have some specifications from the Nassau delegation of the League of Women Voters. Certainly I have not preached nullification."

Smith told how he attended a conference in the White House in 1922 at which prohibition enforcement was discussed by the governors assembled. He said he was one of only two men at the conference who had gone home and conferred with their enforcement officials.

"Forget the Volstead act as a subject for discussion to be carried on at the state capitol," Smith said. "That discussion was ended as far as the people of this state are concerned in 1920 when the government said 'keep your hands off.'"

J. F. GOULD MAKES SCATHING STATEMENT TODAY

SAYS POLICY OF ENGINEERS OF WAR DEPARTMENT IS INIMICAL TO WILD LIFE

DESTROYS THE FISH BREEDING GROUNDS, DRIVES MIGRATORY FOUL AWAY

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 3.—(UP)—The policy of the board of engineers of the war department for rivers and harbors in handling upper Mississippi river reservoirs was scathingly denounced by J. F. Gould, state game and fish commissioner, today.

He charged that the government's method in regulations of lake levels is destroying Minnesota's fish-breeding grounds, driving migratory fowl from the state and causing destruction of mature fish.

Commissioner Gould announced the intention of strenuously opposing the decision of the board of engineers not to change its policy in regard to reservoirs of the upper Mississippi.

"They claim in Washington they are acting to keep up the water levels for navigation when all they do is cause the lake levels to fluctuate, thus destroying our wild life."

"Unless this practice is stopped by next spring the state will have to give up its pike hatcheries. This business of lowering lake levels is destroying our pike breeding grounds. It also causes hundreds of tons of fish to be stranded when the water suddenly recedes, thus killing off the mature fish."

"Beside that, it is destroying feeding and breeding grounds for migratory fowl. All last spring and summer the water in Lake Winnepigoshis for instance, was left at a certain level and hundreds of beaver built their winter homes there. Then this fall the water suddenly was left out and the beaver were left with no protection. Now the gates are closed and the water is so high that the beaver homes are totally under water."

"Not only that, but release of waters has flooded meadows and farming lands, and has left lake shore dwellers sometimes with 80 feet of mud between them and water."

"All we ask is that the levels of the lakes be kept fairly even and that should not be difficult. There have been many indignation meetings on this matter at many northern Minnesota towns and the entire northern part of the state is worked up over this business."

Commissioner Gould maintained that the levels of the river could be maintained by better regulation of the lakes, without injuring fish and game life and without causing such wide fluctuations in lake levels.

"We certainly will demand a hearing on this subject," the commissioner said. "Major R. C. Williams, district engineer in St. Paul, made a favorable report on this matter and all the war department did was turn us down cold. It is inconsistent."

REPEAL SOUGHT OF THEATRE ADMISSIONS OF $1 AND LESS

Washington, Dec. 3.—(UP)—The new $235,000,000 tax bill was completed today by the house ways and means committee, ready for introduction into the house Monday.

It will be taken up by the house probably Tuesday, and is expected to pass with some amendments, within ten days.

Democrats, under the leadership of Rep. Garner, Tex., ranking democrat on the committee, will seek to reduce taxes another $100,000,000. Among other things, they will fight for complete abolition of the automobile tax, instead of the cut from 3 to 1½ per cent as the bill provides.

This would lop off $66,000,000 in revenue alone, instead of the $33,000,000 auto tax cut provided by the bill.

Other principal reductions of the bill are:

Corporation tax, reduced from 13½ to 11½ per cent, a loss in revenue of $166,000,000.

Repeal of taxes on theater admissions of $1 and less, a revenue loss of $8,000,000.

Reduction of taxes on club dues from 10 to 5 per cent, a revenue loss of $5,000,000.

A $12,000,000 revenue loss would be caused by an increase $2,000 to $3,000 of the tax on corporations with net incomes of less than $20,000. Repeal of stamp taxes and taxes on cereal beverages and other reductions are also provided by the bill.

The estate tax, whose repeal was sought by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, is retained in the bill.

No reduction is provided on individual income taxes, which formed the major consideration of the last three previous revenue bills.

GOV. AL SMITH VOICES OPINION OF PROHIBITION

NEW YORK GOVERNOR, PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITY, SPEAKS OF ITS ENFORCEMENT

"PEOPLE HAVE RIGHT TO OPPOSE LAW WITH WHICH THEY ARE NOT IN SYMPATHY"

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith, democratic presidential possibility, last night voiced his opinions of prohibition and its enforcement.

The governor told members of the New York State League of Women Voters that he stood for law enforcement but that "one of the fundamental rights of citizenship is the right of our people to organize to oppose any law and any part of the constitution with which they are not in sympathy."

The question of prohibition law enforcement is not one for either the nation or the state, Smith said. He declared it was a local issue.

If there is any such case, I should like to have some specifications from the Nassau delegation of the League of Women Voters. Certainly I have not preached nullification."

Smith told how he attended a conference in the White House in 1922 at which prohibition enforcement was discussed by the governors assembled. He said he was one of only two men at the conference who had gone home and conferred with their enforcement officials.

"Forget the Volstead act as a subject for discussion to be carried on at the state capitol," Smith said. "That discussion was ended as far as the people of this state are concerned in 1920 when the government said 'keep your hands off.'"

J. F. GOULD MAKES SCATHING STATEMENT TODAY

SAYS POLICY OF ENGINEERS OF WAR DEPARTMENT IS INIMICAL TO WILD LIFE

DESTROYS THE FISH BREEDING GROUNDS, DRIVES MIGRATORY FOUL AWAY

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—The policy of the board of engineers of the war department for rivers and harbors in handling upper Mississippi river reservoirs was scathingly denounced by J. F. Gould, state game and fish commissioner, today.

He charged that the government's method in regulations of lake levels is destroying Minnesota's fish-breeding grounds, driving migratory fowl from the state and causing destruction of mature fish.

Commissioner Gould announced the intention of strenuously opposing the decision of the board of engineers not to change its policy in regard to reservoirs of the upper Mississippi.

"They claim in Washington they are acting to keep up the water levels for navigation when all they do is cause the lake levels to fluctuate, thus destroying our wild life."

"Unless this practice is stopped by next spring the state will have to give up its pike hatcheries. This business of lowering lake levels is destroying our pike breeding grounds. It also causes hundreds of tons of fish to be stranded when the water suddenly recedes, thus killing off the mature fish."

"Beside that, it is destroying feeding and breeding grounds for migratory fowl. All last spring and summer the water in Lake Winnepigosis for instance, was left at a certain level and hundreds of beaver built their winter homes there. Then this fall the water suddenly was left out and the beaver were left with no protection. Now the gates are closed and the water is so high that the beaver homes are totally under water."

"Not only that, but release of waters has flooded meadows and farming lands, and has left lake shore dwellers sometimes with 80 feet of mud between them and water."

"All we ask is that the levels of the lakes be kept fairly even and that should not be difficult. There have been many indignation meetings on this matter at many northern Minnesota towns and the entire northern part of the state is worked up over this business."

Commissioner Gould maintained that the levels of the river could be maintained by better regulation of the lakes, without injuring fish and game life and without causing such wide fluctuations in lake levels.

"We certainly will demand a hearing on this subject," the commissioner said. "Major R. C. Williams, district engineer in St. Paul, made a favorable report on this matter and all the war department did was turn us down cold. It is inconsistent."

BETTER TIMES FOR FARMERS ARE PREDICTED

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE
JARDINE IN ANNUAL REPORT

DOLLAR

By JOSEPH S. WASNEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, Dec. 3.—Better times for farmers were predicted today by Secretary of Agriculture Jardine in his annual report.

Pointing out that the farmer's dollar
now has a buying power only eight per cent below the prewar index level, Jardine outlined specific ideas for continuing improvement of the farmer's lot.

He favored extension of co-operative marketing, urging a statute for large farm business organizations, owned and controlled by farmers and manned by strong executives chosen by the producers.

He opposed government participation in farm business, and especially opposed governmental price fixing.

He favored a federal farm board, to protect both farmers' and the public's interests, and advocated long term mortgage credits for farmers.

The states, he said, could aid matterially in putting agriculture on a firmer basis by correcting certain banking, taxation and public expenditure practices. In this connection he noted that many sections are "over banked," leading to bank failures and consequent bankruptcy for some farmers.

He advised a change in present
tariffs, and counseled alternatives to relieve the agriculturist of some onerous tax burdens.

Jardine also emphasized that aid,
other than financial, could be given the farmer so his net income would increase. Public agencies, for instance, could co-operate with the farmer to achieve a better balance between production and demand.

"Efforts should be made," he said,
"to diminish waste, to lessen margins between producers and consumers' prices, to reduce transportation and distributing, and to lessen the farmer's overhead charges by lowering or redistributing tax burdens by improving agriculture credit facilities. Farmers should be encouraged to enhance their bargaining power through co-operative marketing and the responsibility of the public in helping to reduce price fluctuations due to unavoidable gluts and shortages of agriculture products should be recognized in a practical manner."

Concerning cotton, Jardine said:
"From the standpoint of price, the improvement has been remarkable and it is estimated that should cotton continue at the present level, returns to farmers for lint alone will exceed by about $150,000,000 the income from last year's crop."

No marked scarcity exists in any product, he said, due to good balancing of crops. Moreover, he noted a marked increase of efficiency among farmers who now make a greater production with a smaller farm population. The tractor and other machines have aided in this.

"Farm management," he said, "has become more efficient, a better balance has been established among agriculture enterprises and progress has been made in adjusting production to market requirements."

WILL ROGERS IS AIRING KNOWLEDGE OF MEXICAN LANGUAGE

Aboard President Calles' Special
Train, en route to Aguas Calientes, Mexico, Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—Will Rogers, cowboy comedian and self-appointed unofficial American ambassador to the world at large, was revealed today as the personification of the man in the magazines who learns how to do things.

Armed with a pocket-sized volume entitled "Spanish in One Week," Rogers is talking to Mexico in her own language.

With Dwight W. Morrow, acting American ambassador, Rogers took a tour of this section of Mexico as the guest of President Calles.

from him, but to call out his best strength, that he may be able to bear
the burden.—Phillips Brooks.

Early Detroit Newspapers

The Detroit Morning Post came into existence 25 years after the Detroit Gazette, which was the first paper in Detroit and published in 1817. Both of these papers are now out of existence.

Dainty Frock of Soft Blue Silk With V Neck

Showing an afternoon frock of soft blue silk, with its V neck outlined in strawberry pink crepe. The pink slip is revealed by cutting away of the gown in front. The embroidery is in various shades of pink, with gray and silver thread. Two inches added to length of skirt and an unusual cuff are features.

Shoes and Stockings in Variety of Designs

Footwear, shoes and stockings, matching and selected to complete a suit or ensemble, are shown in new shades of taupe, beige, brown and smoke gray, in leathers that are treated to give them a novel finish. Some of these have a high glaze, some have a dull surface, and the soft skins are particularly fashionable. Suede and antelope are used for dressy street shoes as well as for afternoon. The reptile skins of finer grain are still considered smart, and among the most attractive shoes for fall and winter are those made of a plain leather, with trimming of narrow strips of snake or lizard skin.

Stockings are very important with sports dress, for now that the term is applied to a larger variety of styles it is no longer considered necessary to wear only wool socks with costumes of this type. For rough wool materials stockings of the same sort are important, but lisle and silk are worn with the sports suits and frocks of crepe, velvet and the handsome Rodier fabrics, which, though woven of worsted, are threaded with strands of gold and silver. With the beige and gold Kashavelline suits are worn beige shoes of plain kid, with edges and pattern outlined with fancy leather. With a light blue square mesh of wool, combined with a figured material having a blue ground and a decorative art design, are worn gray antelope shoes piped with black, and gray silk stockings.

Cire Materials Among Fashions of Season

Cire materials are very chic and may be seen in several styles of gowns designed by both French and American artists. For two seasons past this type of material has been shown in ribbon which was used most for hats, and as a dress trimming. The several different styles of cire shown at the Paris openings are being well received on this side and are now used in several sheer weaves. An entire bodice made of cire, with a wide sash tied at one side, is combined with a lace skirt of three flounces gathered full. The contrast of materials is startling because of the varnished surface of the cire. Hats made of cire are among the extreme novelties in millinery, having much the appearance of leather helmets. Collars, cuffs, bags and belts are among the smaller articles made of cire or trimmed with it, and a parasol designed for the advance southern resort season is made of black net, shirred and finished with several small ruffles of cire ribbon.

Moire Is Name of Stone Used in New Chokers

Moire as a word has been, for some, associated only with rich fabrics, but this season there is a new stone in pastel tints with light and dark streaks running throughout that is called by the same name. These beads are mostly seen in the new chokers that, in place of the diminutive clasps, have huge brooches that are worn in front. The bracelets to go with these necklaces are made of smaller beads and are strung together on fine silver chains. For those who prefer the linked bracelets a few are shown with cabochon stones and alternating enameled links.

Winter Headgear Varied; Most Crowns Much Lower

Hats, like clothes, show a style for every person. It is almost impossible to lay down rules for winter millinery because of the variety of ideas and prevalence of originality.
One characteristic is the lower crown, which is in evidence everywhere. Particularly on sports hats are the crowns nearer normal. At Paton's a particularly low-crowned sports hat is being shown.

fat chicken recently and in prepar-

hen has two hearts, perfectly formed and in good condition, one hanging just a little higher than the other.
It was evidently a case of "two hearts beating as one."

In the Twin Cities where one death

When they learn that the Gul-

Eyesight of Snakes

The milky appearance of the eyes of a snake shortly before the slough is cast is due to the separation of the outer layer of epidermis from the cornea, resulting in impaired vision. This eludes rise to various superstitions regarding snakes going blind during the long days of late summer.

Sacco-Vanzetti Demonstration Enthusiasts Acquitted

Boston, Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—Powers Hapgood, nephew of Norman Hapgood, writer, and seven others arrested in connection with a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration, were acquitted by a superior court jury here today.

The jury reached its verdict during the night and the sealed verdict was opened in court this morning.

Meanwhile another jury, which had deliberated more than 20 hours, was still considering separate charges against Hapgood and Cosimo Carvota.

Better 7 Ways

One gasoline may start instantly—but does it give giant power?

Another may have giant power—but does it give good mileage?

Still another may give good mileage—but is it non-detonating?

And yet another may never knock—but is it safe, for you and your motor?

Many gasolines will perform average-well—may have several good qualities, but lack others. The distinguishing feature about Energee DETONOX Gasoline is that it is better SEVEN ways! You will find no other one gasoline which combines all of the seven surpassing qualities of DETONOX without sacrificing one to the other.

WHY BETTER ROADS ARE NEEDED

THERE is no "saturation point" in the automobile industry, we have been told. That need no longer worry us, as long as there are cars for sale there will be buyers.

But the prediction of John J. Raskob, finance chairman of the General Motors corporation, that with the Ford Motor Co. in production in 1928, the automobile industry will produce about 5,000,000 more cars during the year, does give us a serious thought, continues the St. Paul Daily News editorially.

That serious thought is traffic. With the thoroughfares in the cities teeming with automobiles, and during the rush hours and on Sundays and holidays veritable "crushes," where are these 5,000,000 more cars going to navigate? Available country roads in the neighborhood of cities are thronged now on holidays, and the rush to build more good roads has failed woefully to meet the demand.

The possibilities of automobile production are boundless, Raskob says, and there is no reason to doubt him. But where are they going to drive?

This gives the highway officials of every county in the nation a problem—and, in the cities, a nightmare. The only answer is: the roads must be built.

It is an excellent argument for the $20,000,000 highway bond issue in Minnesota.

REAL FIGHTING QUALITIES

MINNESOTA'S football team has demonstrated that it not only possesses an abundance of football knowledge and ability but that it also has real fighting qualities. In both the Notre Dame and Michigan games the team faced defeat, but fought its way out from the short end of the score.

The world likes a winner, but the individual or organization that keeps right on fighting until the final whistle ends the game, wins the respect from all mankind that is akin to love. There is some feeling that football is being given too much prominence in our schools and there is some reason to believe that such a feeling is justified.

It may be that a little too much emphasis is being placed on athletics, but, as the Montevideo News points out: "college athletics, properly conducted, are doing a world of good in teaching the rest of us that it is possible to differ without getting mad about it. The lads on the football field have a sharp difference of opinion as to goals, but it isn't a grudge fight. More of that spirit applied to politics, business or churches wouldn't be so bad."—Thief River Falls Tribune.

THE COMING OF WINTER

THE coming of winter stirs the Princeton Union to give utterance to this bit of philosophy.

It begins to look as though we were going to have a touch of a real old-fashioned winter, but that is not by any means the worst thing that could happen to us. In the spring, summer and fall months most of us spend practically all our leisure hours on the highway or in the garden.

During these long winter evenings we will have the opportunity and inclination to turn to the good magazines and books that should be found in every home. An hour spent with one of the better magazines, which can be classed as literature, or a good book is stimulating and refreshing.

The good Lord has seen fit to surround us with conditions that will make for happiness if we use our intelligence in adapting ourselves to them. Now is the time to enjoy the family circle around the fireside and the comforts of the home, and let us make the most of them.

SPEED LIMIT TEN MILES AN HOUR

If we lived in a town where signs at all highway approaches read "Speed limit ten miles an hour," says the Albert Lea Tribune, we wouldn't rest easy until we had 'em all down.

Try to drive your car ten miles an hour! Such signs only teach people a disregard for the laws. If a town must put up a sign better one like this, "City limits—be reasonable," or "City limits, slow down."

The writer remembers seeing one of these ten mile signs in a northern Iowa township. It had rained and the gumbo road was thick, juicy and smeary, so much so, that the mud ran hub deep. Ten miles an hour on low was the best any car could do in the makeshift of a road in that gumbo.

EVERY one knows how the turkey vanishes when lusciously baked and placed in the place of honor on Thanksgiving day or Christmas table. Statisticians, however, are alarmed and say the birds are being so rapidly depleted by a holiday appetite that a turkey famine is predicted. Some farmers think a turkey thrives best in "wild life," but poultry men contend he should be as carefully fed and housed as any Plymouth Rock.

THAT the longest way around is sometimes the only one to travel, is evidenced in the case of Mr. and Mrs. John Budreau of Rainy River, Ontario. To reach Baudette, a mile from their home, they were obliged to travel 140 miles. Ice in the Rainy River stopped the use of boats and it was not firm enough to carry a vehicle.

ABOUT 240 miles of trunk highway have been "cut out" of the state system by relocation of routes and straightening of curves and turns, according to figures compiled by the State Highway department.

FIVE thousand hunters piled into Pennsylvania when the big game season opened. Deer, elk, bear and mountain lion are sought. However, not too much emphasis should be placed on the mountain lion.

CLAIM is made that this is the coldest start of a December we have had in many years. And winter, by the calendar, does not begin until about the middle of December.

SOME films are real epochs in cinema art. For instance, "The Birth of a Nation" and "Ben Hur." People see them more than once, and that is a real test of their greatness.

The DAIRY

COWS TESTED FOR MILK PRODUCTION

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A dairy herd improvement association is an organization of dairy farmers who co-operatively employ a man to test their cows for economical production of milk and butterfat. The tester visits each farm one day each month, weighs the feed and milk of each cow, tests the milk for butterfat, and figures the results.

The dairy herd improvement association furnishes the dairyman definite information regarding the milk and butterfat production of each cow, thus enabling him to cull out the low producers, to feed the remainder according to known production, and to breed up a herd in which the daughters excel their dams. That all this is adding to the profits of members of dairy herd improvement associations is indicated by the increase in the number of these associations.

It is estimated that the average dairy cow in this country produces annually about 4,500 pounds of milk containing about 180 pounds of butterfat. The records of thousands of cows tested regularly show average yields of more than 7,200 pounds of milk and 282 pounds of butterfat. Several associations have average yearly records of more than 300 pounds of butterfat.

In the Ottertail (Minn.) association in 1924-25 the cow produced an average of 290 pounds of butterfat and returned a little more than $3 for every dollar's worth of feed consumed. Moreover, each cow returned $101 income above feed cost. Commenting on this record J. C. McDowell of the United States Department of Agriculture remarks that any cow that returns $2 for every dollar spent for feed is a good market for feed, and that a cow that each year returns $100 above feed cost is a good labor market.

Rye Will Make Fair to Good Grade of Silage

Rye when cut in the flower or early dough stage will make a fair to good grade of silage. The silage is liable to be rather strong smelling and is liable to taint the milk, although this can be largely overcome by feeding the silage directly after milking rather than before. Care will also have to be exercised that the mangers are well cleaned out and the silo is cut off from the barn as otherwise the odor in the barn itself may be taken up by the milk during milking time. One investigation indicated that rye silage was about 10 per cent less valuable for milk production than was corn silage. It is, perhaps, not quite as palatable as corn silage and has not been largely used for silage.

Centrifugal Force Will Drive Out Skim Milk

Centrifugal force drives the skim milk out of the separator bowl. An increase in speed, therefore, forces more skim milk through the skim milk outlet, consequently richer cream. A decrease in the speed forces less skim milk through the skim milk outlet and the cream, therefore, is thinner. Where different persons operate the separator there can be but little uniformity of speed unless each person makes an effort frequently to count the crank revolutions by their watch. The use of a gasoline engine or some constant power will tend to give a more uniform cream test than when the machine is operated by hand.

Dairy Squibs

Avoid overfeeding the poor-producing dairy cow.

Underfeeding good cows is extravagant waste.

Records of five years show that it costs $43 a year to care for a cow.

A good dairy cow probably consumes more water than any other domestic animal. The more feed consumed, the more water the cow requires.

The man who thinks he is economizing by buying cheap milk pails is fooling himself. A good pail costs a little more but it lasts far longer and is cheaper in the long run.

Tests at the Minnesota experiment station show that a cow producing 27 pounds of milk daily consumed 9.6 gallons of water while one of the same breed giving 13 pounds of milk drank only five gallons of water.

Dairywomen who feed high protein feeds may add more fertility to the soil through manure than is taken out by crops.

Cooling cream and milk immediately after separating takes out the animal heat and removes the smooth flavor so often objected to.

In caring for milk and cream it is necessary to have a clean place free from dirt and flies and a place which precludes the possibility of milk taking up odors.

The Young People of Today

By JOHN BROWN

(Copyright.)

THE Wednesday Afternoon Sewing club of North Lansing met weekly in the parish house and before its adjournment there were three subjects sure to come up for discussion. The disgraceful condition of the pew cushions, the inefficiency of the sexton, and the general intractability of present-day young people.

Today Mrs. Joel Hatfield had been responsible for the introduction of the last topic when she had remarked that the behavior of the boys and girls who went back and forth daily to the high school in Lansing proper was something no respectable parent should countenance. She knew this because she had recently had occasion to go calling in Lansing and had chanced on the trolley both coming and going that bore the young people.

"I certainly make no mistake," she ended complacently, "in sending my Muriel back and forth with her father in the truck. He leaves her at the school steps and she waits afterward in the library for him until he can call for her—such a nice quiet place, the library—and although sometimes it's out of the way for Joe and a nuisance, I tell him we can't be too careful nowadays."

"Well," spoke up Julia Williams, "I make my Harold sit down by himself at one end of the car and do his homework. Then he won't be tempted to join the others in their cutting up. What do you think, Mrs. Edwards?"

Arline Edwards was a comparative newcomer to North Lansing and she continued to baste up her apron seam rapidly before replying. Then she spoke thoughtfully. "Both my boy and girl go back and forth every day and I hope they behave themselves. Yet sometimes I wonder if a little rough-housing doesn't use up surplus energy and animal spirits that might otherwise be spent in more harmful ways."

At that moment the telephone rang and Mrs. Edwards, who sat nearest, lifted the receiver from its hook. A second later, "For you, Mrs. Hatfield," she said.

To the conversation which followed, the others were forced to listen. "Yes, is it you, Joe?" "Why, no, of course not." "Not so far as I know." "Why, what do you suppose—yes, I'll come right home."

She appeared agitated as she turned from the telephone and hastily folded her work. "Sorry, but I've got to go straight home," she said briefly. "Joe wants me."

Two hours later, however, the whole town of North Lansing knew that Muriel Hatfield had not returned from school. That she was not to be found at the library. That, so far as anyone could learn, she had not been seen since her last recitation period.

Across North Lansing supper tables, all sorts of explanations were suggested, the least likely of which, considering her nineteen years and husky build, to say nothing of her father's well-known struggle to get along, was kidnapping for a fabulous ransom.

Still greater excitement was caused when it came to light that Harold Williams had likewise failed to put in an appearance, although to many minds his absence seemed to hint at an explanation for that of Muriel. An elopement!

Mrs. Williams herself had not grown uneasy over Harold until the supper hour passed and still no car produced her son. Until that time, she had supposed him detained either by an extra orchestra rehearsal or basket ball practice. And even now she could not bring herself to believe that his defection was in any way connected with that of Muriel Hatfield. Why, it had been only yesterday that William had spoken of Muriel as a pig-headed bookworm. Yet she felt it her duty to telephone her neighbor.

"Oh, no, it is impossible!" cried poor Mrs. Hatfield. "I am sure Muriel—" she paused, for how could she repeat her daughter's frequently expressed opinion of Harold? And wasn't there, after all, a strange coincidence in the dual disappearances? "Thank you for calling, Mrs. Williams," she said. "If I hear anything, I'll let you know."

At that moment, the front door opened and banged shut. Then the living-room door opened, and there stood Muriel. And behind her was a thin, spectacled young man who was decidedly not Mrs. Williams' son, Harold.

"Muriel!" cried her mother weakly, while her father started toward her, frowning.

"It's too late to scold, dad!" cried the girl and threw her arms about his neck. "John and I are married. I've been engaged for a very long time, but we didn't dare tell you because we knew you wouldn't let me be married until I had finished school. So this afternoon we settled the matter ourselves. I'm so happy—and oh, I forgot you have never met John!"

She turned to the solemn young man who had been watching the little scene with pardonable anxiety. "Son-in-law, parents! Parents, son-in-law!" she said quaintly. "Or, in other words, Mr. John Wellman, assistant librarian of the Lansing Public Library!"

Then Mrs. Hatfield said a funny thing: "And he isn't Harold Williams!"

"Harold Williams?" cried Muriel. "Why, certainly not, Harold Williams was our best man!"

He leaves her at the school steps and she waits afterward in the library for him until he can call for her—such a nice quiet place, the library—and although sometimes it's out of the way for Joe and a nuisance, I tell him we can't be too careful nowadays."

"Well," spoke up Julia Williams, "I make my Harold sit down by himself at one end of the car and do his homework. Then he won't be tempted to join the others in their cutting up. What do you think, Mrs. Edwards?"

Arline Edwards was a comparative newcomer to North Lansing and she continued to baste up her apron seam rapidly before replying. Then she spoke thoughtfully, "Both my boy and girl go back and forth every day and I hope they behave themselves. Yet sometimes I wonder if a little roughhousing doesn't use up surplus energy and animal spirits that might otherwise be spent in more harmful ways."

At that moment the telephone rang and Mrs. Edwards, who sat nearest, lifted the receiver from its hook. A second later, "For you, Mrs. Hatfield," she said.

To the conversation which followed, the others were forced to listen. "Yes, is it you, Joe?" "Why, no, of course not." "Not so far as I know." "Why, what do you suppose—yes, I'll come right home."

She appeared agitated as she turned from the telephone and hastily folded her work. "Sorry, but I've got to go straight home," she said briefly. "Joe wants me."

Two hours later, however, the whole town of North Lansing knew that Muriel Hatfield had not returned from school. That she was not to be found at the library—that, so far as anyone could learn, she had not been seen since her last recitation period.

Across North Lansing supper tables, all sorts of explanations were suggested, the least likely of which, considering her nineteen years and husky build, to say nothing of her father's well-known struggle to get along, was kidnapping for a fabulous ransom.

Still greater excitement was caused when it came to light that Harold Williams had likewise failed to put in an appearance, although to many minds his absence seemed to hint at an explanation for that of Muriel. An elopement!

Mrs. Williams herself had not grown uneasy over Harold until the supper hour passed and still no car produced her son. Until that time, she had supposed him detained either by an extra orchestra rehearsal or basket ball practice. And even now she could not bring herself to believe that his defection was in any way connected with that of Muriel Hatfield. Why, it had been only yesterday that William had spoken of Muriel as a pig-headed bookworm. Yet she felt it her duty to telephone her neighbor.

"Oh, no, it is impossible!" cried poor Mrs. Hatfield. "I am sure Muriel—" she paused, for how could she repeat her daughter's frequently expressed opinion of Harold? And wasn't there, after all, a strange coincidence in the dual disappearances? "Thank you for calling, Mrs. Williams," she said. "If I hear anything, I'll let you know."

At that moment, the front door opened and banged shut. Then the living-room door opened, and there stood Muriel. And behind her was a thin, spectacled young man who was decidedly not Mrs. Williams' son, Harold.

"Muriel!" cried her mother weakly, while her father started toward her, frowning.

"It's too late to scold, dad!" cried the girl and threw her arms about his neck. "John and I are married. I've been engaged for a very long time, but we didn't dare tell you because we knew you wouldn't let me be married until I had finished school. So this afternoon we settled the matter ourselves. I'm so happy and—oh, I forgot you have never met John!"

She turned to the solemn young man who had been watching the little scene with pardonable anxiety. "Son-in-law, parents! Parents, son-in-law!" she said quietly. "Or, in other words, Mr. John Wellman, assistant librarian of the Lansing Public Library."

Then Mrs. Hatfield said a funny thing: "And he isn't Harold Williams!"

"Harold Williams?" cried Muriel. "Why, certainly not. Harold Williams was our best man!"

COACHES ARE SEEKING CLARIFICATION OF FOOTBALL RULES

COMPLICATION BY CHANGES TO BE AVOIDED

BIG TEN COACHES AND ATHLETIC DIRECTORS IN SESSION AT CHICAGO

NATIONAL FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE IS APPEALED TO

By CLARK B. KELSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, Dec. 3.—Clarification of the present football rules rather than further complication by changes was asked of the National Football Rules Committee by Big Ten coaches and athletic directors in annual meeting here.

That the Midwest gridiron strategists wanted no major changes, however, was clearly indicated by a resolution declaring they would "disfavor any changes in the football rules that would increase the possibilities of technical fouls."

A year of grace before any change became effective was also sought in order that they might come to a better agreement on interpretation of the rule. This time would also permit adjustment of style.

The coaches clearly indicated their displeasure with the rules as they now stand by forming a new organization—the western conference football coaches association—which will meet twice yearly to establish a uniform interpretation for the Big Ten schools. Jimmy Phelan of Purdue and Glenn Thistlethwaite of Wisconsin were elected chairman and secretary, respectively. The officers will rotate alphabetically among Big Ten schools hereafter.

The meeting also disclosed that sentiment for elimination of the extra point after touchdown was gaining among Big Ten coaches. A suggestion that the meeting go on record as favoring elimination of the extra point was defeated, however, after much wrangling.

Efforts of Bob Zupke, of Illinois, to have the meeting declare itself in favor of returning the goal posts to their former positions also was defeated. Zupke maintained the additional 10 yards worked too great a hardship on the kickers.

Pilling of open dates with non-conference schools occupied quite a bit of time. The conference adopted the rotation system at its last meeting, so no fireworks developed in that line.

All Big Ten coaches excepting Spears of Minnesota, Wilce of Ohio and Ingwersen of Iowa were present. Rockne of Notre Dame, Clark of Butler, Bachman of Kansas Aggies, Sutherland of Pitt and Deiras of Detroit were among the non-conference coaches present.

Track, wrestling, baseball and minor sports coaches hurried around trying to secure choice dates in completing their schedules. A round-robin schedule system for future years was adopted by the basketball coaches.

The Big Ten outdoor track championships were voted to Northwestern to be held May 25 and 26, while the indoor title events went to Iowa for March 9 and 10. Iowa recently built a new $600,000 field house.

14 Disasters at One Time Call for Red Cross Work

The great size of a disaster does not necessarily mean that it has the stage to itself.

The American Red Cross relief forces were impressed with this fact during the Mississippi Valley flood in recent months. While the relief forces were struggling with this greatest of all disasters in United States history, from April to June they were obliged to furnish relief in 21 other emergencies, including 11 tornadoes. In one tornado approximately 17,000 persons were assisted.

At one period the Red Cross was conducting relief operations in 14 disasters simultaneously, scattered over a wide territory.

Citing the continuity of demands on the organization's resources, Chairman John Barton Payne of the Red Cross has announced the need of 5,000,000 adult members as a result of the Roll Call, Nov. 11 to 24.

The Tenth Anniversary of America's entry into the World War in 1917, is an appropriate time to join the American Red Cross and participate through membership in its peace-time services. Join during the Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24.

FUEL FOR THE WINTER STOVE LEAGUE

The National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs—"the minors," in other words—will be going into convention down in Dallas today, which reminds us that baseball, eclipsed for several months by football, will be back at the top of the sports column soon.

Baseball provides better fuel for Winter Stove League sessions than any other sport. It is played six months in the year and talked twelve.

Once football is out of the way and the "All-America" teams have been chosen, the captains elected, the letters awarded and the coaches re-hired or fired, the gridiron game receives scant attention until the following fall. But you can talk baseball any day of the year, and have an audience.

A little later in the month the major leagues will meet in New York, and there will be plenty to discuss, this time. Among other things of interest to every fan will be discussion, and possibly solution, of the following problems:

1. Disposition of "Kiki" Cuyler, Pittsburgh outfielder, who probably will be traded or sold this month; (Note—Cuyler has since been acquired by the Chicago Cubs.)
2. The search of the Cleveland Indians, now the property of a million-dollar syndicate, for a manager to replace Jack McAllister;
3. Jobs for Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, who were so prominently in the spotlight at this time last year because of the winter scandals, and who are now out of work because their demands are too high.
4. Trades involving Flint Rhem, Lester Bell and Jimmy Ring of the Cardinals, who apparently are slated to leave St. Louis;
5. Search of the New York Giants for battery strength, with the other clubs eyeing them jealously;
6. A possible deal whereby Willie Kamm, third baseman of the Chicago White Sox, will go to some other American League club.

Of all the ball clubs which will be represented at the annual meeting of the majors in New York City ten days hence, the New York Yankees are best equipped to stand pat.

This does not mean, however, that life is a bed of roses for Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the world's champions. The genial colonel has problems of his own.

Having settled the Babe Ruth salary question for a couple of years to come by the simple expedient of paying the home run king more money than any ball player ever received before, Ruppert now finds himself confronted with the outstretched itching palms of several other stars, notably Lou Gehrig.

Lou is crown prince and pretender to the throne of swat, and certainly will demand a substantial increase in salary as the result of his pace-making efforts in the home run hitting race of 1927.

On Monday next, the National League will announce its annual award for the most valuable player of the year. While not at liberty to disclose the name which will be added thereby to baseball Hall of Fame, I may say that there was considerably more difference of opinion in the matter than was the case in the American League, where Lou Gehrig was virtually a unanimous choice.

ESTABLISH 2824 PIN MARK IN THREE GAMES LAST NIGHT

DEFEAT ELKS NO. 2 TWO GAMES, TIED ALDERMAN-MAGHAN FOR FIRST PLACE

DR. HAWKINSON ROLLS 599; JOHN M. BYE DEFEATS BRAINERD MACHINE

The Elks No. 1 had their big evening last night at the Elks building bowling alleys. They won two out of three games from their fellow lodge members, Elks No. 2, smashed the city league record of high pin scoring and tied the invincible Alderman-Maghan team for first place in the league.

And they would have won three games straight had not Guin rolled a "turkey" in the tenth frame of the first game to win by eight pins.

Dr. F. Hawkenson was high scorer of the evening with a total of 599 pins for the three games. The Elks No. 1 rolled the high score of 2824 pins for the new ten pin record here.

In the other games, the John M. Bye team defeated the Brainerd Machine two out of three. The games were closely contested.

GIANT MONOPLANE TAKES OFF FROM MIAMI FOR NICARAGUA

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3.—(UP)—A giant tri-motored Fokker monoplane piloted by Major E. H. Brainerd, took off from Hialeah field, at 6:26 a. m. today on a non-stop flight to Managua, Nicaragua, 1,035 miles away.

The United States marine plane had gasoline and oil sufficient to remain in the air 15 hours.

On board besides Maj. Brainerd were Sergt. R. T. Shepherd and Corporal N. M. Winchester.

The plane utilized only a short distance of the 4,000-foot runway for the take-off, although loaded with 545 gallons of gasoline and 35 gallons of oil.

The Fokker plane left Washington, D. C., a week ago. It will be used in Nicaragua as an aerial ambulance, having accommodations for five stretcher cases.

NEW YORK MEN BUY INTEREST IN ST. PAUL BANK

ONE-THIRD OF STOCK OF FIRST NATIONAL OF ST. PAUL IS SOLD TO BLAIR & CO.

L. W. HILL, CHAIRMAN BOARD OF DIRECTORS, SPEAKS OF TRANSFER

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 3.—(UP)—One of the largest banking transactions here in recent years was believed today to have been consummated with sale of approximately one-third of the stock of the First National Bank of St. Paul to Blair and Co., New York.

L. W. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, has intimated that the deal will result in the bank's recognition as an even greater St. Paul institution.

About 10,000 shares of the bank's stock was sold Thursday to the New York concern by six eastern stockholders. The shares were owned by Mrs. Egil Boeckmann, George Slade, Mrs. Anson Beard, Mrs. Michael Gavin and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Lindley.

The purchase price was $285 per share plus a dividend of $2, due on December 1. "Directors are delighted with this transfer of stock," Chairman Hill said.

Control of the bank, he said, remains with the present board of directors. Wider distribution of the stock in St. Paul will result from public sale by Blair and Co., of the shares that concern purchased, he stated.

FIGHT OVER MOTION PICTURE ACTRESS

Hollywood, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Jean Jarvis, motion picture actress, said to be the cause of an all-American football star being in a hospital here and a movie director in jail, was the object of a police search today.

Edward Usher, former Michigan university halfback, was recovering from a fractured skull caused by being hit over the head with an automobile crank.

William Nigh is in jail charged with assault to commit murder. Miss Jarvis was being sought as a witness.

A quarrel between the men last Saturday night ended when Nigh used an automobile crank as a weapon.

Usher and Miss Jarvis were said by authorities to have attended a party Saturday night. On their way home, Nigh and his chauffeur are said to have assaulted Usher.

Nigh was said to have objected to Miss Jarvis attending the party. The case came to light yesterday when Nigh was arrested.

Seek Rare Blue Poppy in Indian Mountains

Karachi, India.—An expedition is on its way from England to search for a blue poppy in the northwest frontier mountains of India.

The head of the party will be Capt. Kingdon Ward, noted explorer and naturalist, who has already made journeys into China and Tibet to search for unknown plants.

"Blue poppies are by no means unknown," says Captain Ward, "but they are very rare. We shall search for mountain plants and fauna of all kinds and we shall be away from England about a year."

Girl Tourist Thrilled by Camels and Sheikhs

Marrakech, Morocco.—Morocco means camels and sheikhs to the shoals of American schoolgirls who invade the country each autumn chaperoned by Paris finishing-school teachers.

Marrakech sees most of them because they find the herds here which make camel rides possible. No debutante considers her tour complete until she has been camel-riding. Sheikhs are harder to find, the type being a product of the desert interiors.

The schoolgirls visit Morocco early in the fall, at the Christmas holiday or late in the spring. Marrakech the Red, under the shadows of the high Atlas, is the only city where camels in numbers may be obtained, and so the girls do most of their camel-riding here. Only the freight-carrying type of animal is available.

There are no swift "ships of the desert" for the young tourists. But that does not detract from the enjoyment of the flappers, to whom any camel is a camel.

Stage Talk Shocks Hard-Boiled Mayor

Grimby, England.—Grimby travelers have pretty rough crews and the language along the water front of this fishing center is not always refined.

But after attending two performances at leading theaters in London Mayor Ormond of Grimby came home and announced that the language of the London stage was too much for him.

Flagpole Perching May Be Barred on the Coast

Los Angeles, Calif.—The police commission has addressed a letter to the city council asking passage of an ordinance to prohibit the "silly practice of flagpole sitting as immoral and dangerous to public safety." Several sitting spells have occurred here recently, the last of which featured on a flagpole above a downtown dance palace.

Skeery Skalley Was the Best

By AD SCHUSTER

WHEN Simon Skalley was a lad, he wore the look of a startled taun. This, and an easy affiliation, was responsible for the nickname "Skeery." He was afraid, they said, of his own shadow, a queer boy who stepped lightly and seemed always on the point of running.

Skeery Skalley on the way home from school had to cross the fields and pastures. The first half of the trip was to him a never failing delight for here were wild flowers, deep grass, and a satisfying quiet. Then came the barbed wire fence and a land of terror. The boy did not like the looks of the cows and was terror-stricken when he saw a bull.

Skeery climbed the fence, held to the path, and footed it for home. Time and again he told himself he would walk slowly, but there was nothing to fear, but as he walked he imagined the bull, with head lowered and fire streaming from nostrils and eyeballs. Skeery Skalley ran, perhaps and you seen the way he spurned the dirt with beneath his feet, you would have said he flew. At any rate he reached home out of breath and wide-eyed. Once more he had escaped the bull which, by this time, had become a dragon, an ogre, or a pack of wolves.

When he went to high school he was a boy out of place. The famous George Porgie of Mother Goose literature was never tamed with the persistence that attended the efforts of Skeery Skalley's schoolmates. Jeers added to his reticence and the lad walked and ran alone.

When the girls came out to play Skeery Skalley runs away.

They sang that at him and it was true. So much did the boy suffer at the hands of his fellows that he took to bursting from the school door and streaking it across the lots until the voices of his tormentors were lost in the distance. There was not a one who could catch him, and in this was his single triumph.

A tall youth with large eyes and upright carriage, Skeery Skalley approached the voting age with few friends, an active imagination and a fear of girls. He would cross the street when he saw them approach on the sidewalk, would blush when he was cornered, and after each experience would take himself to task even as he had in the days when cows were dragons.

Then there came to Minden, Flossie Campbell, a girl who was different than the rest. It seemed to Skeery that she refused to recognize his bashfulness, that she talked to him direct as one man or girl to another, and demanded his attention and a response. With this girl he could make some show at appearance, she was helping him and he realized she was doing it purposefully. Skeery fell in love and Flossie wondered if she had not overdone her efforts to aid.

There is an age when youth loves heroes and Flossie was young. Skeery with his frightened eyes might have appealed to those looking for poets or men of imagination. To Flossie he was a puzzle.

"Why don't you do something," she asked him, "something to make them see you are not weak or afraid?" And when he did not reply, she added: "Find out that in which you are best, cultivate it, and make good."

"I might write a sonnet," he knew as he said it this was a hopeless appeal.

A few days later Skeery told Flossie he was determined to follow her advice.

"I am going away, to visit an uncle and to live in the large city. I will have a better chance making good where I am not known, and when I do, I'll come back. How good would I have to be if—if I—if you would listen to me, you know, propose?"

It had come and Flossie was sorry. "You would have to be the best in your class, the best in the world." Surely, this was a refusal. He could see that. But Skeery only smiled.

"I'll try," he said.

The departure of Skeery Skalley from Minden was unnoticed for a time. Flossie discovered she was missing the youth and as the months went on realized that she had never judged him fairly. He knew more, she told herself, than all of the others. It was only that he looked all the time, as if he wished to run away.

There came at last news from the missing son of Minden, news that was carried in every newspaper in the land and in those of other countries. Skeery Skalley, the lad who had run in terror from cows, playmates and perhaps, from shadows, had discovered that in which he excelled. He entered the Olympic games and won the Marathon.

"And he did it for me," said Flossie. "I told him he could propose when he was the best in the world. And that is what he is!"

Health and Wealth

"I should say so! He has patients at some of the most expensive health resorts in America and a waiting-list of people whose health will give way as soon as they get money enough to consult him."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

PATIENCE NEEDED TO HOLD THIS JOB

Cutting Flying Field Turf Has Its Hazards.

Washington.—Airplanes being what they are, mules being mules, and grass being what it is, the problem of keeping the turf of a flying field close cropped is one of great complexity, trying alike to the ingenuity of responsible officers and the patience of grass cutters.

Rolling grass, used by army and navy flyers here, is a sizeable establishment. It is not only necessary to keep the turf in condition for planes to land or take off at any time, but to protect the conditions, who must work in the field all day, every day, with their mule-drawn mowers. And a grass-cutting machine, which has never been noted for speed or agility, can give even more damage than it receives if it comes to grips with a swiftly moving, delicately balanced airplane.

The safety problem has been attacked with flags which, fluttering bright red against the green background, from conspicuous places on the grass-cutting equipment, give warning to aviators. But the tribulations of the mowing machine pilots are not so easily reduced. If so inclined, theirs is an opportunity to develop a philosophy of perfect patience.

Whatever their inclinations, they must at least put into practice the credo of such a philosophy. After braving the perils of flying propellers to cut the grass, they must remove it from the turf.

Just as the farmer rakes his hay, they gather the shorn grass into windrows. But frequently, at Bolling field, these windrows, which might be poetic in a less modern environment, are in the path of an airplane, taking off or alighting, with the propeller creating a small but extremely vigorous private windstorm. Then the raking must be done again, the windrows recreated, with hope but without certainty. Clearly, it is a job for a Job.

Bus Is Favorite Ride of London Commuters

London.—Lord Ashfield is trying to discover why it is that women prefer busses.

He is working hard to induce more people to travel on tubes and thus relieve the congestion of London streets. Men listen to the appeals for more tube travel, but women are deaf. They continue to storm crowded busses and shun underground transportation.

One explanation of the popularity of busses is that women are able to do a little window shopping from the top of the open busses, and do not begrudge the added time it takes to make long trips.

It has been found that highly trained business women, who are efficient office workers, patronize the underground quite generally. But housewives, waitresses and young shop assistants prefer busses.

Keep Alive Memory of Barbara Frietchie

Frederick, Md.—Although more than three-score years have passed since the last shot of the Civil war was fired, the patriotic fervor of Barbara Frietchie is still fresh in the memories of her home town folks.

The home of Maryland's Civil war heroine was restored this summer. Hundreds of tourists visited the quaint little brick structure with its dormer windows and low-pitched ceilings.

Articles that tradition says were Dame Frietchie's property form most of the furnishings of the house. These include her rocking chair, spinning wheel, clock, chinaware and even the flag that she is said to have waved in defiance at Stonewall Jackson's southern troops.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL RULES COMMITTEE IS APPEALED TO

By CLARK B. KELSEY (United Press Staff Correspondent) Chicago, Dec. 3.—Clarification of the present football rules rather than further complication by changes was asked of the National Football Rules Committee by Big Ten coaches and athletic directors in annual meeting here.

That the midwest gridiron strategists wanted no major changes, however, was clearly indicated by a resolution declaring they would "disfavor any changes in the football rules that would increase the possibilities of technical fouls."

A year of grace before any change became effective was also sought in order that they might come to a better agreement on interpretation of the rule. This time would also permit adjustment of style.

The coaches clearly indicated their displeasure with the rules as they now stand by forming a new organization—the western conference football coaches association—which will meet twice yearly to establish a uniform interpretation for the Big Ten schools. Jimmy Phelan of Purdue and Glenn Thistlethwaite of Wisconsin were elected chairman and secretary, respectively. The officers will rotate alphabetically among Big Ten schools hereafter.

The meeting also disclosed that sentiment for elimination of the extra point after touchdown was gaining among Big Ten coaches. A suggestion that the meeting go on record as favoring elimination of the extra point was defeated, however, after much wrangling.

Efforts of Bob Zupke, of Illinois, to have the meeting declare itself in favor of returning the goal posts to their former positions also was defeated. Zupke maintained the additional 10 yards worked too great a hardship on the kickers.

Filling of open dates with non-conference schools occupied quite a bit of time. The conference adopted the rotation system at its last meeting, so no fireworks developed in that line.

All Big Ten coaches excepting Spears of Minnesota, Wilce of Ohio and Ingwersen to Iowa were present. Rockne of Notre Dame, Clark of Butler, Bachman of Kansas Aggies, Sutherland of Pitt and Deiras of Detroit were among the non-conference coaches present.

Track, wrestling, baseball and minor sports coaches hurried around trying to secure choice dates in completing their schedules. A round-robin schedule system for future years was adopted by the basketball coaches.

The Big Ten outdoor track championships were voted to Northwestern to be held May 25 and 26, while the indoor title events went to Iowa for March 9 and 10. Iowa recently built a new $600,000 field house.

14 Disasters at One Time Call for Red Cross Work

The great size of a disaster does not necessarily mean that it has the stage to itself.

The American Red Cross relief forces were impressed with this fact during the Mississippi Valley flood in recent months. While the relief forces were struggling with this greatest of all disasters in United States history, from April to June they were obliged to furnish relief in 21 other emergencies, including 11 tornados. In one tornado approximately 17,000 persons were assisted.

At one period the Red Cross was conducting relief operations in 14 disasters simultaneously, scattered over a wide territory.

Citing the continuity of demands on the organization's resources, Chairman John Barton Payne of the Red Cross has announced the need of 5,000,000 adult members as a result of the Roll Call, Nov. 11 to 24.

The Tenth Anniversary of America's entry into the World War in 1917, is an appropriate time to join the American Red Cross and participate through membership in its peace-time services. Join during the Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24.

FIRE DOES HEAVY DAMAGE AT ALTUS, OKLA., LUMBER YARD

Altus, Okla., Dec. 3.—(UP)—Approximately $375,000 damage was done here at 5 a. m. this morning when fire practically wiped out the plant and yards of the Rounds & Porter Lumber Co., and the Noble Ray Wholesale Produce Co.

Damage to Rounds & Porter was estimated at between $300,000 and $350,000; while the Noble Ray company was placed at $50,000.

The fire was thought to have originated in the picking room of the produce company.

Captured American Citizen is Released by Mexican Bandits

Washington, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Thomas W. Thompson, American citizen captured by Mexican bandits at his mine near Copala, Sinaloa, Nov. 25 has been released unharmed, American Consul Blocker at Mazatlan informed the state department today.

Thompson was held for ransom, but the consul's message did not indicate whether it was paid.

American officials in Mexico had made representations to Mexican authorities on request of Mrs. T. W. Thompson, the miners' wife, who is now in Berkeley, Cal.

SPORTSMATTER BY FRANK GETTY UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

FUEL FOR THE WINTER STOVE LEAGUE

The National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs—"the minors," in other words—will be going into convention down in Dallas today, which reminds us that baseball, eclipsed for several months by football, will be back at the top of the sports column soon.

Baseball provides better fuel for Winter Stove League sessions than any other sport. It is played six months in the year and talked twelve.

Once football is out of the way and the "All-America" teams have been chosen, the captains elected, the letters awarded and the coaches re-hired or fired, the gridiron game receives scant attention until the following fall. But you can talk baseball any day of the year, and have an audience.

A little later in the month the major leagues will meet in New York, and there will be plenty to discuss, this time. Among other things of interest to every fan will be discussion, and possibly solution, of the following problems:

1. Disposition of "Kiki" Cuyler, Pittsburgh outfielder, who probably will be traded or sold this month; (Note—Cuyler has since been acquired by the Chicago Cubs.)
2. The search of the Cleveland Indians, now the property of a million-dollar syndicate, for a manager to replace Jack McAllister;
3. Jobs for Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker, who were so prominently in the spotlight at this time last year because of the winter scandals, and who are now out of work because their demands are too high.
4. Trades involving Flint Rhem, Lester Bell and Jimmy King of the Cardinals, who apparently are slated to leave St. Louis;
5. Search of the New York Giants for battery strength, with the other clubs eyeing them jealously;
6. A possible deal whereby Willie Kamm, third baseman of the Chicago White Sox, will go to some other American League club.

Of all the ball clubs which will be represented at the annual meeting of the majors in New York City ten days hence, the New York Yankees are best equipped to stand pat.

This does not mean, however, that life is a bed of roses for Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the world's champions. The genial colonel has problems of his own.

Having settled the Babe Ruth salary question for a couple of years to come by the simple expedient of paying the home run king more money than any ball player ever received before, Ruppert now finds himself confronted with the outstretched itching palms of several other stars, notably Lou Gehrig.

Lou is crown prince and pretender to the throne of swat, and certainly will demand a substantial increase in salary as the result of his pace-making efforts in the home run hitting race of 1927.

On Monday next, the National League will announce its annual award for the most valuable player of the year. While not at liberty to disclose the name which will be added thereby to baseball Hall of Fame, I may say that there was considerably more difference of opinion in the matter than was the case in the American League, where Lou Gehrig was virtually a unanimous choice.

ESTABLISH 2824 PIN MARK IN THREE GAMES LAST NIGHT

DEFEAT ELKS NO. 2 TWO GAMES, TIED ALDERMAN-MAGHAN FOR FIRST PLACE

DR. HAWKINSON ROLLS 599; JOHN M. BYE DEFEATS BRAINERD MACHINE

The Elks No. 1 had their big evening last night at the Elks building bowling alleys. They won two out of three games from their fellow lodge members, Elks No. 2, smashed the city league record of high pin scoring and tied the invincible Alderman-Maghan team for first place in the league.

And they would have won three games straight had not Guin rolled a "turkey" in the tenth frame of the first game to win by eight pins.

Dr. F. Hawkinson was high scorer of the evening with a total of 599 pins for the three games. The Elks No. 1 rolled the high score of 2824 pins for the new ten pin record here.

In the other games, the John M. Bye team defeated the Brainerd Machine two out of three. The games were closely contested.

GIANT MONOPLANE TAKES OFF FROM MIAMI FOR NICARAGUA

Miami, Fla., Dec. 3.—(UP)—A giant tri-motored Fokker monoplane piloted by Major E. H. Brainerd, took off from Hialeah field, at 6:26 a. m. today on a non-stop flight to Managua, Nicaragua, 1,035 miles away.

The United States marine plane had gasoline and oil sufficient to remain in the air 15 hours.

On board besides Maj. Brainerd were Sergt. R. T. Shepherd and Corporal N. M. Winchester.

The plane utilized only a short distance of the 4,000-foot runway for the take-off, although loaded with 545 gallons of gasoline and 35 gallons of oil.

The Fokker plane left Washington, D. C., a week ago. It will be used in Nicaragua as an aerial ambulance, having accommodations for five stretcher cases.

NEW YORK MEN BUY INTEREST IN ST. PAUL BANK

ONE-THIRD OF STOCK OF FIRST NATIONAL OF ST. PAUL IS SOLD TO BLAIR & CO.

L. W. HILL, CHAIRMAN BOARD OF DIRECTORS, SPEAKS OF TRANSFER

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 3.—(UP)—One of the largest banking transactions here in recent years was believed today to have been consummated with sale of approximately one-third of the stock of the First National Bank of St. Paul to Blair and Co., New York.

L. W. Hill, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, has intimated that the deal will result in the bank's recognition as an even greater St. Paul institution.

About 10,000 shares of the bank's stock was sold Thursday to the New York concern by six eastern stockholders. The shares were owned by Mrs. Egil Boeckmann, George Slade, Mrs. Anson Beard, Mrs. Michael Gavin and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Lindley.

The purchase price was $285 per share plus a dividend of $2, due on December 1. "Directors are delighted with this transfer of stock," Chairman Hill said.

Control of the bank, he said, remains with the present board of directors. Wider distribution of the stock in St. Paul will result from public sale by Blair and Co., of the shares that concern purchased, he stated.

FIGHT OVER MOTION PICTURE ACTRESS

Hollywood, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Jean Jarvis, motion picture actress, said to be the cause of an all-American football star being in a hospital here and a movie director in jail, was the object of a police search today.

Edward Usher, former Michigan university halfback, was recovering from a fractured skull caused by being hit over the head with an automobile crank.

William Nigh is in jail charged with assault to commit murder. Miss Jarvis was being sought as a witness.

A quarrel between the men last Saturday night ended when Nigh used an automobile crank as a weapon.

Usher and Miss Jarvis were said by authorities to have attended a party Saturday night. On their way home, Nigh and his chauffeur are said to have assaulted Usher.

Nigh was said to have objected to Miss Jarvis attending the party. The case came to light yesterday when Nigh was arrested.

Seek Rare Blue Poppy in Indian Mountains

Karachi, India.—An expedition is on its way from England to search for a blue poppy in the northwest frontier mountains of India.

The head of the party will be Capt. Kingdon Ward, noted explorer and naturalist, who has already made journeys into China and Tibet to search for unknown plants.

"Blue poppies are by no means unknown," says Captain Ward. "but they are very rare. We shall search for mountain plants and fauna of all kinds and we shall be away from England about a year."

Girl Tourist Thrilled by Camels and Sheikhs

Marrakech, Morocco.—Morocco means camels and sheikhs to the shoals of American schoolgirls who invade the country each autumn chaperoned by Paris finishing-school teachers.

Marrakech sees most of them because they find the herds here which make camel rides possible. No debutante considers her tour complete until she has been camel-riding. Sheikhs are harder to find, the type being a product of the desert interiors.

The schoolgirls visit Morocco early in the fall, at the Christmas holiday or late in the spring. Marrakech, the Red, under the shadows of the high Atlas, is the only city where camels in numbers may be obtained, and so the girls do most of their camel-riding here. Only the freight-carrying type of animal is available.

There are no swift "ships of the desert" for the young tourists. But that does not detract from the enjoyment of the flappers, to whom any camel is a camel.

Stage Talk Shocks Hard-Boiled Mayor

Grimsby, England.—Grimsby travelers have pretty rough crews and the language along the water front of this fishing center is not always refined.

But after attending two performances at leading theaters in London Mayor Ormond of Grimsby came home and announced that the language of the London stage was too much for him.

Flagpole Perching May Be Barred on the Coast

Los Angeles, Calif.—The police commission has addressed a letter to the city council asking passage of an ordinance to prohibit the "silly practice of flagpole sitting as immoral and dangerous to public safety." Several sitting spells have occurred here recently, the last of which featured on a flagpole above a downtown dance palace.

Skeery Skaley Was the Best

By AD SCHUSTER

WHEN Simon Skaley was a lad, he wore the look of a startled lamb. This, and an easy altercation, was responsible for the nickname "Skeery." He was afraid, they said, of his own shadow, a queer boy who stepped lightly and seemed always on the point of running.

Skeery Skaley on the way home from school had to cross the fields and pastures. The first half of the trip was to him a never failing delight for here were wild flowers, deep grass, and a satisfying quiet. Then came the barbed-wire fence and a land of terror. The boy did not like the looks of the cows and was terror-stricken when he saw a bull.

Skeery climbed the fence, held to the path, and footed it for home. Time and again he told himself he would walk slowly, that there was nothing to fear, but as he walked he imagined the bull, with head lowered and fire streaming from nostrils and eye-balls. Skeery Skaley ran. Perhaps you have seen the way he spurned the dirt path beneath his feet, you would

Cutting Flying Field Turf Has Its Hazards.

Washington.—Airplanes being what they are, mules being mules, and grass being what it is, the problem of keeping the turf of a flying field close cropped is one of great complexity, trying alike to the ingenuity of responsible officers and the patience of grass cutters.

Bolling field, used by army and navy flyers here, is a sizeable establishment. It is not only necessary to keep the turf in condition for planes to land or take off at any time, but to protect the conditioners, who must work in the field all day, every day, with their mule-drawn mowers. And a grass-cutting machine, which has never been noted for speed or agility, can give even more damage than it receives if it comes to grips with a swiftly moving, delicately balanced airplane.

The safety problem has been attacked with flags which, fluttering bright red against the green background, from conspicuous places on the grass-cutting equipment, give warning to aviators. But the tribulations of the mowing machine pilots are not so easily reduced. If so inclined, theirs is an opportunity to develop a philosophy of perfect patience.

Whatever their inclinations, they must at least put into practice the credo of such a philosophy. After braving the perils of flying propellers to cut the grass, they must remove it from the turf.

Just as the farmer rakes his hay, they gather the shorn grass into windrows. But frequently, at Bolling field, these windrows, which might be poetic in a less modern environment, are in the path of an airplane, taking off or alighting, with the propeller creating a small but extremely vigorous private windstorm. Then the raking must be done again, the windrows recreated, with hope but without certainty. Clearly, it is a job for a job.

Bus Is Favorite Ride of London Commuters

London.—Lord Ashfield is trying to discover why it is that women prefer busses.

He is working hard to induce more people to travel on tubes and thus relieve the congestion of London streets. Men listen to the appeals for more tube travel, but women are deaf. They continue to storm crowded busses and shun underground transportation.

One explanation of the popularity of busses is that women are able to do a little window shopping from the top of the open busses, and do not begrudge the added time it takes to make long trips.

It has been found that highly trained business women, who are efficient office workers, patronize the underground quite generally. But housewives, waitresses and young shop assistants prefer busses.

Keep Alive Memory of Barbara Frietchie

Frederick, Md.—Although more than three-score years have passed since the last shot of the Civil war was fired, the patriotic fervor of Barbara Frietchie is still fresh in the memories of her home town folks.

The home of Maryland's Civil war heroine was restored this summer. Hundreds of tourists visited the quaint little brick structure with its dormer windows and low-pitched ceilings.

Articles that tradition says were Dame Frietchie's property form most of the furnishings of the house. These include her rocking chair, spinning wheel, clock, chinaware and even the flag that she is said to have waved in defiance at Stonewall Jackson's southern troops.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting
By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.
Is He Sentimental?
Here is a valuable key to know the man or woman in whom you are interested. Check over his writing and look for the high I dots and high letters like the t or d. Then watch the terminals. If you find that these turn back toward the left you will know with these two keys combined that the writer thinks fondly of the past. He reverts things that mean love and will cherish old letters, cards, or gifts of sentiment.
This type of writer will hold the thought of a birthday or wedding anniversary in mind and will celebrate with much ceremony.
Gracefully formed flying t bars coupled with the above stroke—the back-curling terminal—show a type who would be pronounced in a sentimental way and would be deeply touched by music, nature, especially moonlight poetry. Generally this type writes a disorderly looking page.
Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied.

Santa Claus Sells Christmas Seals

By ELIZABETH COLE

"WELL, well, well," exclaimed old Santa Claus, as he put down his pack and gave a jovial grin to Mr. and Mrs. Moneybags. "So you never knew what Christmas seals do. Dear, dear, dear! Come with me then."

The portly Mr. and Mrs. Moneybags really cared very little about the so insignificant as the penny Christmas seal, but when summoned by no less personage than the Old St. Nicholas himself, they felt called upon to follow.

"I'll show you a sight for any financier. One penny goes a long way here, Mr. Moneybags," went on Santa as he climbed aboard the well known sleigh and gathered up the reins that drive the celebrated "Dasher-Crasher."

"Step aboard," he called to his guests. "Don't mind sitting on a few toys back there. When it comes to children's toys, you know, you're featherweights, my friends."

Indeed, they seemed to be, for they sat airily on a gross or so of dolls, woolly dogs, Teddy Bears and other of Noah's animals and never smacked a thing. The Moneybags, knowing nothing of children, knew nothing either of toys, so they evidenced no surprise at the feat of seating their combined 255 pounds on the conglomeration of gifts for Christmas stockings.

Anyway there they sat. Old Santa started the sleigh and off they went. The wise old man wished to reform the Moneybags (The reader by this time has probably suspected that too), so he was taking the miserly couple on a tour of inspection.

"Now, Mr. and Mrs. Moneybags," continued the jovial gentleman, "watch carefully. We'll cover the trail of the tuberculosis sticker. Five hundred million, two hun-ded thousand one-inch seals were sold last year. When placed end to end, my friends, there are 63,360 seals in one mile. One mile of health for $633.60—Ah, yes, a penny goes a long way. Get comfy, for we shall travel far tonight—from New York City to Los Angeles and back again, my friends."

The Moneybags did not look particularly elated over the prospects of such a unique and lengthy sleigh ride, but then they never looked elated over anything save their bankbook, when they saw an extra million added to its incomprehensible figures.

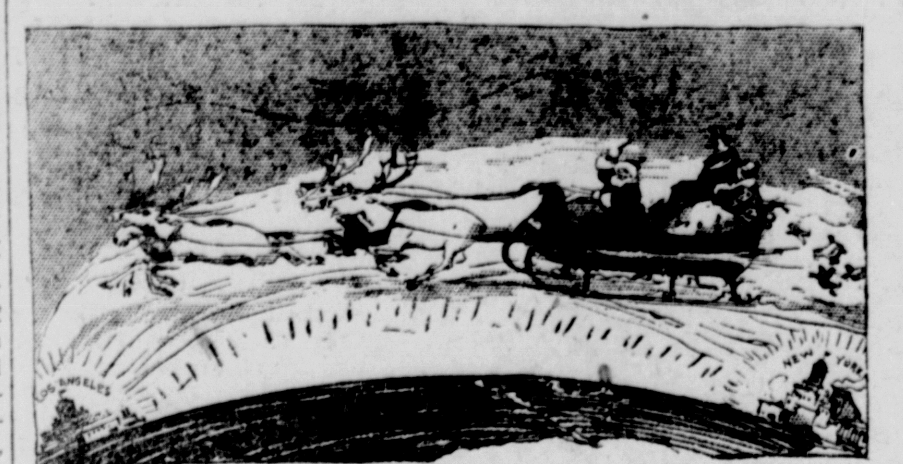

"Yes, my friends, all along the way I shall point out certain interesting sights," continued the friend of children and mankind. And he did. One mile of health, $633.60; two miles, $1,267.20, on they sped! And these are some of the health-giving sights the hard-hearted old couple saw as they passed by city, hamlet and town on that strange ride.

They saw fifteen hundred tuberculosis associations all affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association who sell the health seals and take charge of distributing the money raised; over one million people sick with tuberculosis, of which number 5,000 are children; 700 sanatoria and hospitals to care for them; 3,500 specially trained public health nurses who visit the schools and homes and teach health; two million boys and girls practicing daily health habits in the Modern Health Crusade; 1,000 open air schools where sickly children can build up their strength and keep from having tuberculosis; and 600 permanent tuberculosis clinics and many travelling clinics ably again suspected, the Moneybags arrived home, hard-hearted no longer. Mrs. Moneybags drew out her checkbook and actually smiled as she murmured, "A penny certainly does go a long way in health, Mr. Claus. May I have the privilege of purchasing a few miles?" Mr. Moneybags also actually smiled as he drew out his checkbook and murmured, "You are an excellent salesman, Mr. Claus—and what you are selling must continue to be purchased. I will also take a few miles of health."

And old Santa Claus grinned his jovial grin and exclaimed, "Thank you, my friends, I'll place these checks with the ten cents of Tommy, the newsboy. You are now worthy of being a partner with him and all the others who understand that a penny for health goes a long way. Ho, hum," continued the old boy as he stretched and yawned, "selling seals makes filling stockings fun, my friends. I stuff 'em all with health." And he jumped into his sleigh and was off.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

By EDNA PURDY WALSH
Editor, Character Reading Magazine.

Is He Sentimental?

Here is a valuable key to know the man or woman in whom you are interested. Check over his writing and look for high I dots and high letters like the t or d. Then watch the terminals. If you find that these turn back toward the left you will know with these two keys combined that the writer thinks fondly of the past. He reverts things that mean love and all cherish old letters, cards, or gifts of sentiment.

This type of writer will hold the thought of a birthday or wedding anniversary in mind and will celebrate with much ceremony.

Gracefully formed flying t bars coupled with the above stroke—the back-curling terminal—show a type who would be pronounced in a sentimental way and would be deeply touched by music, nature, especially moonlight poetry. Generally this type writes a disorderly looking page.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied.

He had a long and a short of glory, and that a few years of humdrum life might lead him to a war.

LAWRENCE GRAY and NORMA SHEARER in "AFTER MIDNIGHT"

"After Midnight" Presents a New Norma Shearer

"After Midnight," Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle which opens Sunday at the Lyceum theatre, is a dramatically human play of a life which begins in poverty and ends in poverty, and presents the star in a new characterization. The episodes between the beginning and end are set in the trappings of wealth, filled with the tinsel and glitter of the night clubs of a great city and portray a young girl's struggle to combat life. The enemy is not some silk-hat villain, as is usually the case on the screen, but that much more brutal thing, Life, itself.

Phyllis Haver and Harrison Ford are the featured players in "No Control" showing at the Lyceum tonight only.

PINCHOT CLAIMS HUGE ELECTRIC MONOPOLY EXISTS

Washington, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Former Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, today offered to submit evidence of a huge electric monopoly to the senate in case it decided to investigate that industry.

In an open letter to Senator Thomas Walsh, democrat, Montana, Pinchot said the concentration of public utilities in a few hands was a menace to the economic freedom of the American people.

Forty-one corporations, three quarters of which are dominated, owned or controlled by the General Electric company of New York, Doherty of New York, Morgan of New York, Ryan of New York and Insull of Chicago, control four-fifths of all electric energy produced in this country, Pinchot charged.

"After Midnight," Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle which opens Sunday at the Lyceum theatre, is a dramatically human play of a life which begins in poverty and ends in poverty, and presents the star in a new characterization. The episodes between the beginning and end are set in the trappings of wealth, filled with the tinsel and glitter of the night clubs of a great city and portray a young girl's struggle to combat life. The enemy is not some silk-hat villain, as is usually the case on the screen, but that much more brutal thing, Life, itself.

Phyllis Haver and Harrison Ford are the featured players in "No Control" showing at the Lyceum tonight only.

SYNOPSIS

Hurricane Haley kidnaps Polly, a dancer from "The Riverside," because he thinks that she was behind a plot which robbed him of all his money. On board his schooner, the "Sea Sprite," he treats her very severely, but Polly soon learns to forgive him, and comes to love the sea. The crew, led by the mate, Brady, mutiny, through a desire to possess Polly, and though Haley manages to subdue them he falls to make his peace with Polly. During the struggle a steamer rams the ship and though the schooner is not much damaged, Brady and another sailor are killed. A mate from the steamer comes aboard and Hurricane sends Polly back to Frisco on the departing boat.

All the sunlight had gone, and he was back in the cold arctic seas which he hated so much. And before him were all the hardships of another cruise.

Later, when Bronson came to him, he seemed to be in another world, and with none of his old zest, he agreed listlessly and allowed himself to be taken below.

Ten days later Hurricane Haley came on deck for the first time. Fever, set in from an irritation of the wound in his arm, had taken the sparkle from his eye, and for the first time in his life he felt the need of a friend. Bronson had come back into his own. Born to something far different, he was coming into his own again through the responsibility of command.

The crew always eager to take advantage of anyone who would give them an inch had tried to give him trouble at first. But a left that spoke of training, and a right hook which, if it did not carry the sleep producing qualities that Hurricane's did, at least had the same results in the end, discour-

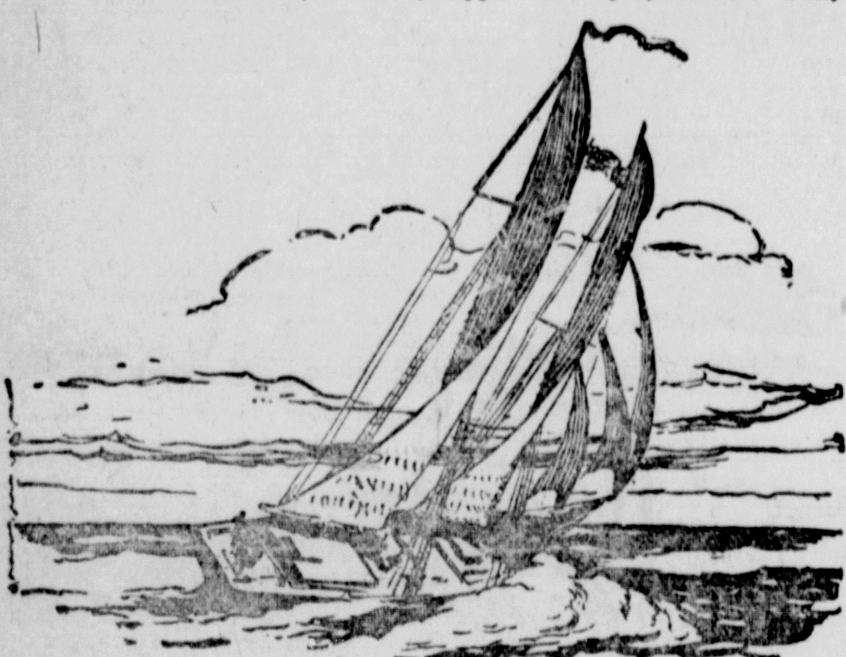

a moment Limey did not notice the accident, but the thrashing in the water told him that something was wrong. Turning around he saw Hurricane treading water and the seal swimming towards him. Seeing that he had to move quickly Limey jumped to the side of the boat and jumped. He landed with his heavy sea boots on the seal's head. The animal dived, and Limey sank out of sight.

Like many sailors Limey could not swim, and when Hurricane climbed aboard the boat, he saw the sailor sinking. Guessing what was wrong Hurricane dived in again and managed to get hold of the cockney's sweater. Limey was out, and the icy water froze his clothes, but a glass of strong liquor in front of the galley fire soon brought him to himself. As he remarked:

"It's all in a day's work, an' she did a 'ell of a lot more than that for me."

Hurricane again owed his life to Polly. Soon after that the bow of the Sea Sprite was pointed south and with every stitch of canvas spread to a fresh favorable wind she raced for Frisco. Never before had the Sea Sprite carried such a press of canvas, and even Bronson was afraid to give the order to take any in. Just as long as the schooner did not show signs of wanting to drive right under Hurricane kept her crowded, and the Sea Sprite answered as if she too wanted to reach Frisco again.

More scared than ever the schooner Sea Sprite rolled lazily in the Pacific Ocean. In a few more hours the pilot would be aboard and by the time that the sun sank the schooner would have finished her cruise. Bronson watched the skipper and prayed that Polly aged them, and when at last Haley was able to come on deck again, he found them as orderly as the crew of an Atlantic liner.

Limey had been Bronson's right hand man, and the little cockney had more than an idea that he was not the only member of the crew who hailed from the British Isles, but wished to forget it.

Favorable winds had carried the Sea Sprite to her cruising grounds and the boats had been broken out and all prepared for the work on hand. A pile of skins, waiting to be stretched and salted lay near a large boiler and furnace, where the layer of fat from the seals was boiled down for oil. All was ready for work, and even to Haley there was something different there. There was a spirit of enthusiasm that no sealer had ever had before. The men laughed and sang about their jobs, and turning away Hurricane knew why. It was Polly. She had given these rough men something to live for. She had brought Bronson back from obscurity and made a man of him. And he had sent her away.

As the months passed by Hurricane grew to admit that he loved Polly and to count the days when he would be able to return. Time after time, as he stood alone on the bridge of the Sea Sprite, he had thought of turning for home. But he had put it by. He had a duty to the owners, nor would he leave the Arctic till his hold was filled. "That's the way Polly would do it," he mused.

Steadily, skin by skin, the Sea Sprite collected her cargo. One day after his usual inspection of the hold Hurricane decided that one more good catch and he would turn for home. He was not filled but almost eighteen months had passed since the schooner left Frisco and few skippers stayed out longer than that.

That day Hurricane had reason to see the influence the Polly had had on the crew. A herd of seals had been surprised on an ice-ber and seven of the ten had been captured. A big bull of the herd, however, managed to escape, and Limey and Hurricane started in pursuit. A seal is usually a quiet enough animal but wounded and at bay a bull seal is a match for anyone. Limey was rowing and Hurricane stood in the bow of the boat with a short harpoon. The seal was swimming slowly and as they overtook it Hurricane threw the harpoon. The seal turned and the weapon shot harmlessly past. Hurricane was slightly off balance, and when the rope attached to the end of the harpoon tightened, it pulled Haley out of the boat. For would be waiting. He knew the agony that Hurricane had been through, knew how often he had been tempted to go home, and he appreciated the effort that had made him wait till his holds were filled. Hurricane as well as Bronson was bigger than he used to be. The pilot came aboard and swinging back into the wind the schooner bowed along. The same crew waited for the same pleasures that they had wished for before, but the skipper was waiting and watching for a definite something. Something that he had had, and thrown away. Something that he was willing to give his life could he regain it.

It was night in Frisco. Dirty, sordid, glamorous Frisco. The Frisco of the Barbary Coast, the Frisco of the dirty streets and docksides, the Frisco of the moral degenerates of every race, but to Hurricane it was home. Each yellow light, blinking through the cobwebbed windows of every tawdry gin-mill reminded him of home, each little snapping cup hunting vainly through the gutters, for something edible was a friend he had been waiting to see.

Yet he spoke to no one. For hours he wandered through streets packed with the reeking polyglot mobs, elbowed around by drunken sailors, jeered at by women whose salutation he had not heard, but drinking in the odors and atmosphere of Polly's home.

For some reason he was afraid to go to see her.

"What in hell did I ever let her go for?" he mused.

That was just it. By letting her go he had severed his connections with her and had done it so effectually that he was left with no means of approach. He admitted that he had only sent her home because the sea was no longer any punishment to her. He admitted to himself that he was sorry that he had treated her so roughly. Once or twice he had even caught himself wondering if she had really been to blame. But anyway he had treated her in such a manner that if he ever were kind to her it would mean that he admitted himself in the wrong, and Hurricane did not want to do that.

Tony, the apple man, greeted him with his usual gold filled smile, but Hurricane walked slowly past, leaving the little Italian wondering. Mother Ward received little attention as she told him that she had purposely emptied his room when she heard from "Atala," which had passed the Sea Sprite, that he would be in a day or so. He paid for his room, washed, then tried to sit down and think. (To be continued.)

ABE GINSBERG, ST. PAUL, HELD BY POLICE AT CHICAGO TODAY

OTHER ALLEGED GANGSTERS FROM MINNESOTA CITY BEING SOUGHT

Chicago, Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—Abe Ginsberg, St. Paul, was held by police here today and other alleged gangsters from the Minnesota city were being sought in connection with the kidnapping of Morris Roisner, St. Paul business man, here, Thursday. Roisner was believed to be a prisoner of gangsters somewhere in Chicago. Ransom of $75,000 was demanded for his release.

Police charged Ginsberg was the leader of the kidnapping gang, and that his St. Paul hoodlums had obtained aid from Chicago gangsters in their activities.

Ginsberg, police said, is under indictment in Cleveland for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

"Frisco Dutch" Brown, alleged associate of Gene McLaughlin, who is wanted in connection with the kidnapping of Jake Adler, Chicago cabaret proprietor, last summer, was arrested with Ginsberg.

Roisner was in Chicago on business Thursday, police said. During the day he made an appointment to discuss a real estate deal, but did not keep the engagement. He has been missing since.

Shortly after his disappearance, police said, Ginsberg, representing himself as a lawyer, demanded $75,000 ransom from Mrs. Roisner. He had three letters, purporting to have been written by Roisner, asking that the $75,000 be paid.

Ginsberg was arrested early today at what police said was a conference of gangsters. Six other men and four women also were arrested, but they were not believed to be directly connected with the kidnapping plot.

Ginsberg, police said, admitted he had seen Roisner, but said he was forced by members of the gang to visit the kidnapped man. He had been blindfolded on the trip to the place where Roisner was held, he said.

MRS. HELEN PARKER SO TELLS JURY IN THE LILLIENDAHL MURDER TRIAL

DURING THAT TIME NEW JERSEY OFFICERS WERE SEARCHING STATE FOR BEACH

By SAM LOVE

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Courtroom, May's Landing, N. J., Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—Mrs. Helen Parker today testified in the Lilliendaahl murder trial that from Sept. 27 to Oct. 5, Willis Beach was hiding in her home at Lenbrook Heights, Pa.

During that time, New Jersey officers were searching for him as a material witness to the murder of Dr. William Lilliendaahl, for which Mrs. Margaret Lilliendaahl and Beach are now on trial.

This evidence was given by Mrs. Parker and produced by the defense to show that Beach could not have been in Baltimore, Md., Oct. 1. Samuel Barg, star witness for the state, had testified that he met Beach in Baltimore on that date and Beach had told him he killed Dr. Lilliendaahl.

Mrs. Parker said she knew Beach was wanted in New Jersey and that she hid him in the loft of her home. So well was he hidden, she said, that her father and her stepmother, who occupied the house with her, did not know he was there.

Her husband, James, corroborated his wife's testimony.

Willis Beach himself followed as the next witness.

Courtroom, May's Landing, N. J., Dec. 3.—(U.P.)—Willis Beach, Vineland, N. J., chicken fancier, today denied on the witness stand any connection with or knowledge of the murder of Dr. Wm. Lilliendaahl.

Beach and Mrs. Margaret Lilliendaahl are on trial for the murder of the doctor, who was Mrs. Lilliendaahl's husband.

The state maintains that they killed the aged physician that they might be able to pursue a clandestine love affair.

Beach smilingly took the oath and slid far down in the witness chair identified himself and the questioning began.

"Did you take any part in the murder of Dr. Lilliendaahl?" Edison Hedges his attorney asked.

"I did not," answered Beach in a manner which indicated resentment at the very suggestion.

He told of his meeting with Dr. Lilliendaahl.

"I went to his place to look at a chicken house," said Beach.

It was soon after that that he first met Mrs. Lilliendaahl. A friendship sprang up among them all, he said.

They went on automobile rides together and he often would sit on front seats besides Mrs. Lilliendaahl in the Lilliendaahl car.

He denied there was any trouble between him and his wife.

"Is there now?" he was asked.

"No," he answered emphatically.

Temper

"Moses," says a learned preacher, had one great fault and it kept him out of the promised land. He never learned to control his temper. And Moses is a good "bad example." The lack of self-control keeps otherwise good men and women forever out of the land of promise. Without self-control all other good qualities are built on the sand.

Sounding Ocean Depths

If a leaky vessel is heavy enough to sink and is not broken up by explosion or the buffeting of the waves, it will sink to the ocean bottom. Soundings of the ocean bottom are made by dropping a stinker, which is a 60-pound iron shot, on the end of a wire or rope. An indicator attached to the reel on the deck of the ship shows just how many fathoms of wire have run out.

SYNOPSIS

Hurricane Haley kidnaps Polly, a dancer from "The Riverside," because he thinks that she was behind a plot which robbed him of all his money. On board his schooner, the "Sea Sprite," he treats her very severely, but Polly soon learns to forgive him, and comes to love the sea. The crew, led by the mate, Brady, mutiny, through a desire to possess Polly and though Haley manages to subdue them, he fails to make his peace with Polly. During the struggle a steamer runs the ship and though the schooner is not much damaged, Brady and another sailor are killed. A mate from the steamer comes aboard and Hurricane sends Polly back to Frisco on the departing boat.

All the sunlight had gone, and he was back in the cold arctic seas which he hated so much. And before him were all the hardships of another cruise.

Later, when Bronson came to him, he seemed to be in another world, and with none of his old zest, he agreed listlessly and allowed himself to be taken below.

Ten days later Hurricane Haley came on deck for the first time. Fever, set in from an irritation of the wound in his arm, had taken the sparkle from his eye, and for the first time in his life he felt the need of a friend. Bronson had come back into his own. Born to something far different, he was coming into his own again through the responsibility of command.

The crew always eager to take advantage of anyone who would give them an inch had tried to give him trouble at first. But a left that spoke of training, and a right hook which, if it did not carry the sleep producing qualities that Hurricane's did, at least had the same results in the end, discour-

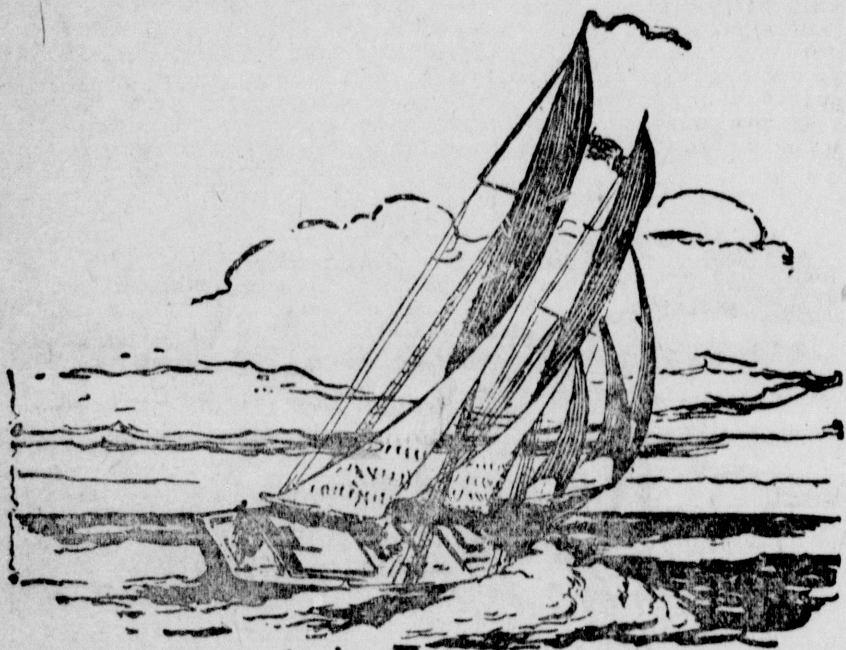

a moment Limey did not notice the accident, but the thrashing in the water told him that something was wrong. Turning around he saw Hurricane treading water and the seal swimming towards him. Seeing that he had to move quickly Limey jumped to the side of the boat and jumped. He landed with his heavy sea boots on the seal's head. The animal dived, and Limey sank out of sight.

Like many sailors Limey could not swim, and when Hurricane climbed aboard the boat, he saw the sailor sinking. Guessing what was wrong Hurricane dived in again and managed to get hold of the cook's sweater. Limey was out, and the icy water froze his clothes, but a glass of strong liquor in front of the galley fire soon brought him to himself. As he remarked:

"It's all in a day's work, an' she did a 'ell of a lot more than that for me."

Hurricane again owed his life to Polly. Soon after that the bow of the Sea Sprite was pointed south and with every stitch of canvas spread to a fresh favorable wind she raced for Frisco. Never before had the Sea Sprite carried such a press of canvas, and even Bronson was afraid to give the order to take any in. Just as long as the schooner did not show signs of wanting to drive right under Hurricane kept her crowded, and the Sea Sprite answered as if she too wanted to reach Frisco again.

More scared than ever the schooner Sea Sprite rolled lazily in the Pacific Ocean. In a few more hours the pilot would be aboard and by the time that the sun sank the schooner would have finished her cruise. Bronson watched the skipper and prayed that Polly aged them, and when at last Haley was able to come on deck again, he found them as orderly as the crew of an Atlantic liner.

Limey had been Bronson's right hand man, and the little cooky had had more than an idea that he was not the only member of the crew who hailed from the British Isles, but wished to forget it.

Favorable winds had carried the Sea Sprite to her cruising grounds and the boats had been broken out and all prepared for the work on hand. A pile of skins, waiting to be stretched and salted lay near a large boiler and furnace, where the layer of fat from the seals was boiled down for oil. All was ready for work, and even to Haley there was something different there. There was a spirit of enthusiasm that no sealer had ever had before. The men laughed and sang about their jobs, and turning away Hurricane knew why. It was Polly. She had given these rough men something to live for. She had brought Bronson back from obscurity and made a man of him. And he had sent her away.

As the months passed by Hurricane grew to admit that he loved Polly and to count the days when he would be able to return. Time after time, as he stood alone on the bridge of the Sea Sprite, he had thought of turning for home. But he had put it by. He had a duty to the owners, not would he leave the Arctic till his hold was filled.

"That's the way Polly would do it," he mused. Steadily, skin by skin, the Sea Sprite collected her cargo. One day after his usual inspection of the hold Hurricane decided that one more good catch and he would turn for home. He was not filled but almost eighteen months had passed since the schooner left Frisco and few skippers stayed out longer than that.

That day Hurricane had reason to see the influence that Polly had had on the crew. A herd of seals had been surprised on the ice-does and seven of the ten had been captured. A big bull of the herd, however, managed to escape, and Limey and Hurricane started in pursuit. A seal is usually a quiet enough animal but wounded and at bay a bull seal is a match for anyone. Limey was rowing and Hurricane stood in the bow of the boat with a short harpoon. The seal was swimming slowly and as they overtook it Hurricane threw the harpoon. The seal turned and the weapon shot harmlessly past. Hurricane was slightly off balance, and when the rope attached to the end of the harpoon tightened, it pulled Haley out of the boat. For

Chicago, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Abe Ginsberg, St. Paul, was held by police here today and other alleged gangsters from the Minnesota city were being sought in connection with the kidnapping of Morris Roisner, St. Paul business man, here, Thursday.

Roisner was believed to be a prisoner of gangsters somewhere in Chicago. Ransom of $75,000 was demanded for his release.

Police charged Ginsberg was the leader of the kidnapping gang, and that his St. Paul hoodlums had obtained aid from Chicago gangsters in their activities.

Temper

"Moses," says a learned preacher, had one great fault and it kept him out of the promised land. He never learned to control his temper." And Moses is a good "bad example." The lack of self-control keeps otherwise good men and women forever out of the land of promise. Without self-control all other good qualities are built on the sand.

Sounding Ocean Depths

If a leaky vessel is heavy enough to sink and is not broken up by explosion or the buffeting of the waves, it will sink to the ocean bottom. Soundings of the ocean bottom are made by dropping a sinker, which is a 60-pound iron shot, on the end of a wire or rope. An indicator attached to the reel on the deck of the ship shows just how many fathoms of wire have run out.
